“Sometimes we all need someone to talk to”

Academic: parents and carers

School, college or university can be a stressful place for young people, as it likely was when you, yourself were younger. Perhaps the young person in your life is struggling with:

- Exam or test stress
- School anxiety
- Not feeling ‘good enough’
- Avoiding school or refusing to go
- Low self-worth
- Transitioning from one place to another (i.e. primary to secondary, school to college)
- Keeping up with homework or coursework

It’s important to support the young person while also helping them understand that both obstacles and change is an unavoidable part of life and brings resilience. Overcoming hurdles and tough times helps us to grow as a person, and gives us skills to deal with problems in later life

How can I support a young person with academic issues?

- Reassure them that doing their best is good enough
- Create a timetable with them so that they can break homework/coursework into smaller, less daunting tasks
- Help them to revise for test and exams
- Provide a quiet environment where they can study with no interruptions
- Listen to any worries they may have around their place of study
- If they find it hard to pinpoint the issues, work together to help them identify what worries them.
- Suggest having a friend meet them at the gate/entrance; this can reduce anxiety around walking into school and getting to the classroom
- Liaise with the place of study to see what support they can offer the young person
- Check in with the regularly to see if things are improving
