“Sometimes we all need someone to talk to”

Grief: Parents and Carers

Losing someone or something we love can be hard, even more so as a child. You may be struggling with how to support them, especially as different stages of grief occur and fluctuate.

How might the feel?

- Shocked
- Angry
- Sad and depressed
- Guilty
- Lost or abandoned
- Numb (feeling nothing)

These are all normal reactions, and it's important to let them know that. Ask them what they need and how you can help them.

How can I support them?

- Be direct, open, and honest- help them to understand what's going on
- Understand that they may need space to process things- don't push them to talk until they are ready
- When they are ready to talk, listen without any distractions- you can't 'fix' things, but just listening can be enough. Let them know they can talk to you at any time
- Give the young person the choice of being involved in any events to celebrate the life as this helps them to feel included in the grieving process
- Go for a walk together, paint, draw, or look through photos together
- Suggest tributes- maybe create a memory box of the deceased's favourite things, lighting a candle together, holding a memorial service or looking through photos
- Encourage them to reach out and share their feelings with others, such as an Eye to Eye counsellor who are trained to work with grief
- Encourage them to reach out and share their feelings with others, such as an Eye to Eye counsellor who are trained to work with grief
- Promote self-care, making sure they are eating and sleeping well, and being gentle with themselves
- Be mindful of triggering occasions such as birthdays, Christmas, and anniversaries of deaths- help them remember and celebrate the person on these days
